

Tizong Cup Tennis Championship

The School of International Education and the School of Mechanical Engineering clashed forces on May 13, 2010, in the South Gymnasium to vie for the title of the Tizong Cup Tennis Champion. As non-seed players, the team had advanced to the semifinals by defeating 3:0 School of Electronic, Information and Electrical Engineering, an old rival who bested the team in the previous round. After the victory over the School of Life Sciences and Biotechnology, the team met its final opponent, the School of Mechanical Engineering, on the court. With an impressive score of 3:0, the international students took home the championship trophy--and all the honor and prestige it embodied.
